

Misanthropy

Misanthropy is the general hatred, dislike, distrust or contempt of the human species or human nature. A misanthrope or misanthropist is someone who holds such views or feelings. The word's origin is from the Greek words μῖσος (mīsos, "hatred") and ἄνθρωπος (ānthropos, "man, human"). The condition is often confused with asociality.

Contents

Western culture

Arts

Philosophy

Middle Eastern thought

See also

References

Western culture

Arts

Gustave Flaubert once declared that he would "die of suppressed rage at the folly of [his] fellow men."^[1] Misanthropy has also been ascribed to a number of writers of satire, such as William S. Gilbert ("I hate my fellow-man") and William Shakespeare (Timon of Athens). Jonathan Swift is widely believed to have been misanthropic (see A Tale of a Tub and, most especially, Book IV of Gulliver's Travels). Poet Philip Larkin has been described as a misanthrope.^[2]

Molière's play The Misanthrope is one of the more famous French plays on this topic. Less famous, but more contemporary is the 1971 play by Françoise Dorin, Un sale égoïste (A Filthy Egoist) which takes the point of view of the misanthrope and entices the viewer to understand his motives.

Michelangelo has been called a misanthrope.^[3] Don Van Vliet (commonly known as Captain Beefheart) has been described as a misanthrope, with close friend Kristine McKenna stating that he "thought human beings were the worst species that was ever dreamed up".^[4] Morrissey, a songwriter, has been dubbed "pop's most famous misanthrope".^[5]

Fernando Pessoa's "factless autobiography" The Book of Disquiet has been described as misanthropic.

Le Misanthrope, 1719 ad.

Philosophy

The pre-Socratic philosopher Heraclitus was by various accounts a misanthrope and a loner who had little patience for human society.^{[6][7]} In a fragment, the philosopher complained that "people [were] forever without understanding" of what was, in his view, the nature of reality.

In Western philosophy, misanthropy has been connected to isolation from human society. In Plato's Phaedo, Socrates describes a misanthrope in relation to his fellow man: "Misanthropy develops when without art one puts complete trust in somebody thinking the man absolutely true and sound and reliable and then a little later discovers him to be bad and unreliable ... and when it happens to someone often ... he ends up ... hating everyone."^[8] Misanthropy, then, is presented as a potential result of thwarted expectations or even excessively naïve optimism, since Plato argues that "art" would have allowed the potential misanthrope to recognize that the majority of men are to be found in between good and evil.^[9] Aristotle follows a more ontological route: the misanthrope, as an essentially solitary man, is not a man at all: he must be a beast or a god, a view reflected in the Renaissance view of misanthropy as a "beast-like state".^[10]

There is a difference between philosophical pessimism and misanthropy. Immanuel Kant said that "Of the crooked timber of humanity, no straight thing can ever be made", and yet this was not an expression of the uselessness of mankind itself. Kant further stated that hatred of mankind can take two distinctive forms: aversion from men (anthropophobia) and enmity towards them.^[11] The condition can arise partly from dislike and partly from ill-will.^[11]

Martin Heidegger has also been said^[12] to show misanthropy in his concern of the "they"—the tendency of people to conform to one view, which no one has really thought through, but is just followed because, "they say so". This might be thought of as more a criticism of conformity than of people in general. Unlike Schopenhauer, Heidegger was opposed to any systematic ethics; however, in some of his later thought, he does see the possibility of harmony between people, as part of the four-fold, mortals, gods, earth, and sky.

Middle Eastern thought

In early Islamic philosophy, certain freethinkers such as Ibn al-Rawandi, a skeptic of Islam, and Muhammad ibn Zakariya ar-Razi often expressed misanthropic views.^[13]

In the Judeo-Islamic philosophies (800 - 1400), the Jewish philosopher, Saadia Gaon, uses the Platonic idea that the self-isolated man is dehumanized by friendlessness to argue against the misanthropy of anchorite asceticism and reclusiveness.^[14]

See also

- | | |
|---|---|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none">AntisocialAntihumanismAntinatalismAnthrophobiaCynicism (philosophy)Emotional isolationHumanism | <ul style="list-style-type: none">MisandryMisogynyMisotheismNihilismPhilosophical pessimismPhilanthropyRational egoism |
|---|---|

- Voluntary Human Extinction Movement

References

1. The Letters of Gustave Flaubert: 1857-1880 (https://books.google.com/books?id=vFzQdS8N_5lC&pg=PR14). Harvard University Press. 1982. p. xiv. ISBN 0674526406.
2. Raban, Jonathan (October 17, 1992). "Books: Mr Miseryguts: Philip Larkin's letters show all the grim humor that was a hallmark of his great poems, but, as the years pass, they also chart the true depths of his misanthropy and despair" (<https://www.independent.co.uk/arts-entertainment/books-mr-miseryguts-philip-larkins-letters-show-all-the-grim-humour-that-was-a-hallmark-of-his-great-1558190.html>). The Independent. Retrieved June 18, 2017.
3. Shoham, Shlomo Giora (2008). Art, Myth and Deviance (<https://books.google.com/books?id=1bALBwAAQBAJ&pg=PA211>). Cambridge Scholars Publishing. p. 211. ISBN 978-1443802970.
4. Cromelin, Richard (December 18, 2010). "Don Van Vliet dies at 69; avant-garde rock musician known as Captain Beefheart" (<http://articles.latimes.com/2010/dec/18/local/la-me-captain-beefheart-20101218/2>). Los Angeles Times. Retrieved June 18, 2017.
5. Hawking, Tom (July 15, 2014). "The Most Morrissey Lyrics From Morrissey's New Album" (<http://flavorwire.com/466695/the-most-morrissey-lyrics-from-morrisseys-new-album>). Flavorwire. Retrieved June 30, 2017.
6. "Heraclitus_of_Ephesus" (https://www.ancient.eu/Heraclitus_of_Ephesos/). Ancient History Encyclopedia. Retrieved 2017-12-08.
7. 1953-, Chitwood, Ava (2004). Death by philosophy : the biographical tradition in the life and death of the archaic philosophers Empedocles, Heraclitus, and Democritus. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press. p. 80. ISBN 0472113887. OCLC 54988783 (<https://www.worldcat.org/oclc/54988783>).
8. Stern, Paul (1993). Socratic Rationalism and Political Philosophy: An Interpretation of Plato's Phaedo (<https://books.google.com/books?id=nJAFnvm2fg4C>). SUNY Press. p. 94. ISBN 978-0-7914-1573-3.
9. Stern 95.
10. Jowett, John (2004). The Oxford Shakespeare: The Life of Timon of Athens (<https://books.google.com/books?id=gHTKzYKrh6wC>). Oxford UP. p. 29. ISBN 978-0-19-281497-5.
11. Immanuel Kant (2001-03-19). Lectures on Ethics. Cambridge University Press. p. 191. ISBN 978-0-521-78804-5.
12. Farin, Ingo; Malpas, Jeff (2016-02-19). Reading Heidegger's Black Notebooks 1931-1941. Farin, Ingo,, Malpas, Jeff. Cambridge, Massachusetts. p. 321. ISBN 0262034018. OCLC 926820993 (<http://www.worldcat.org/oclc/926820993>).
13. Stroumsa, Sarah (1999), Freethinkers of Medieval Islam: Ibn Al-Rawāndī, Abū Bakr Al-Rāzī and Their Impact on Islamic Thought, Brill Publishers, p. 9, ISBN 9004113746
14. Goodman, Lenn Evan (1999), Jewish and Islamic Philosophy: Crosspollinations in the Classic Age, Edinburgh University Press, pp. 25–6, ISBN 0748612777

Retrieved from "<https://en.wikipedia.org/w/index.php?title=Misanthropy&oldid=931440894>"

This page was last edited on 18 December 2019, at 22:47 (UTC).

Text is available under the Creative Commons Attribution-ShareAlike License; additional terms may apply. By using this site, you agree to the Terms of Use and Privacy Policy. Wikipedia® is a registered trademark of the Wikimedia Foundation, Inc., a non-profit organization.